Sen. Wallop's reply

I am outraged by The Washington Times's April 10 story, "Wallop whacks Webster on Hill," which focused my criticism of this country's counterintelligence effort on one individual. In point of fact, my criticism goes far beyond any one man or one agency.

Washington Times writers Bill J
Gertz and Jeremiah O'Leary should know that my displeasure is leveled at many areas of government, particularly the Central Intelligence Agency and the State Department.

While it is "news" to be critical of Director of Central Intelligence-designate William Webster, the Gertz-O'Leary piece would have been of much greater use had it accurately assessed my concerns with regard to improved counterintelligence and thus, the security of this country. A
